If you have any concerns, or wish to make a complaint, about the processing of your data please contact us in the first instance. You also have the right to make a complaint at any time to the Information Commissioner’s Office (ICO) and their full details can be found at www.ico.org.uk.

Changes to your personal data

It is important that the personal data we hold about you is accurate and current. Please keep us informed if your personal data changes during your relationship with us. If you wish to update your personal data, please contact the lawyer dealing with your matter or us the contact details above.

The data we collect

In order to carry out our business we need to collect and process various types of personal data, or personal information. The types of personal data we may collect and process are as follows:-

- Identity data – this includes details of your name (and previous names), marital status, title, date of birth, photographic identification and gender.
- Contact data – this includes address information, email addresses and telephone numbers.
- Financial data – this will include information such as bank account details.
- Transaction data – this will include information relating to client’s legal requirements and information required in order to conduct Court or other legal proceedings.
- Technical data – this includes things such as IP address, browser type and version, time zone settings and location, browser plug-in types and versions, operating system and platform and other technology on devices you are using and other information relating to the devices you have used to access our website.
- Usage Data – this includes information about your use of our website.
- Marketing data – this will include preferences you have expressed when subscribing to our mailing lists or when you have opted to receive marketing material from us.

- Special categories of personal data – we do not routinely collect this type of data. We will however process it in limited circumstances, for example, where required to do so for legal or regulatory purposes or where you have provided us with such information as it is necessary for a specific service we are providing to you.

If you fail to provide personal data

There are occasions where we are obliged to collect personal data by law (for instance, in relation to anti-money laundering) or under the terms of a contract we have with you. If you fail to provide the personal data in these situations we may not be able to perform the contract we have or are trying to enter into with you (for example, to provide you with legal services). In this case, we may have to decline to provide or receive the relevant services. If this is the case we will advise you at the time the personal data is collected.

How your data is collected

We use a variety of methods to collect data from and about you, including:

Direct interactions: You provide us with personal data in your correspondence with us. This may be provided when you:

- enquire about or apply for our services;
- market or provide your supplier services to us;
- subscribe to our publications or otherwise ask for our marketing;
- participate in our marketing, recruitment or other promotional events;
- participate in our client seminars and similar events; or
- give us feedback.

Website, cookies and marketing: You give us your personal data, which includes Profile Data, Usage Data, Technical Data, Professional Information and/or Marketing Data, when you use our website or review the publications or marketing we send you.

Third-party or publicly available sources: We will also obtain personal data from other sources such as, but not limited to; financial institutions, other professional service providers (such as law firms), Government agencies, regulatory bodies public registers of individuals or companies.

How we use your data

We will only use your personal data when the law allows us to and we therefore have a legal basis for processing. The main reasons for using your personal data are likely to be:

- where we need to perform a contract which we are about to enter into or have entered into with you;
- where we need to comply with a legal or regulatory obligation;
- where necessary for our legitimate interests, provided that your fundamental rights do not override those interests. This can mean, for instance, that it is in our interest, to monitor how you are using any client portals or access to systems to ensure that the security of such portals or systems is maintained. We make sure we consider and balance any potential impact on you (both positive and negative) and your rights before we process your personal data for our legitimate interests; and

- “consent and explicit consent”: where you have provided your consent or explicit consent to processing your personal data.

We do not generally rely on consent as the legal basis for processing your personal data with the exception of electronic marketing. You can withdraw your consent to receipt of marketing at any time by contacting marketing@hayes-storr.com .

Purposes for which we use your data

We have set out below a description of the ways in which we use your personal data and the legal bases we rely on to do so. Where appropriate, we have also identified our legitimate interests in processing your personal data.

There may be more than one legal ground under which we use your personal data depending on the specific purpose for which we are using your data.

Marketing

We aim to provide you with choice as to whether you receive publications from us or invitations to seminars and events.

We will not use your personal data to send you marketing materials if you have requested not to receive them. You are able to opt out by following the link on marketing emails from us or by contacting marketing@hayes-storr.com.

Cookies

Cookies are very small text files that are stored on your computer when you visit some websites.

We use cookies to help identify your computer so we can remember your details when accessing the Client Area, track usage and your preferences.

You can disable any cookies already stored on your computer, but these may stop our website from functioning properly, including not being able to log in to the Client Area. Data is captured monitoring when and by whom access was requested to the Client Area for the purpose of statistical information and audit control.

Change of purpose

We will only use your personal data for the purposes for which we collected it as detailed above, unless we reasonably consider that we need to use it for another reason and that reason is compatible with the original purpose. If you wish to receive an explanation as to how the processing for the new purpose is compatible with the original purpose, please contact us.

If we need to use your personal data for an unrelated purpose, we will notify you and we will explain the legal basis which allows us to do so.

Please note that we may process your personal data without your knowledge or consent, in compliance with the above rules, where this is required or permitted by law.

Where we keep your data

We are based in the UK and we store our data within the EU.

Data security

We are committed to data security and have put in place security measures to prevent your personal data from unauthorised access, loss or alteration. In addition to physical and electronic procedures to safeguard your information we also limit access to your personal data to those employees, agents, contractors and third parties who have a business need to know. In addition they will only process your personal data on our instructions and will be subject to a duty of confidentiality.

How long we keep your data

We will only use and store information for so long as it is required for the purpose it was collected and in accordance with our Retention & Destruction Policy which you can request from us using the contact details above. How long information will be stored depends on the information in question and what it is being used for.

Any personal data received from the client in connection with preventing money laundering or terrorist financing will be processed only for the purposes of preventing money laundering or terrorist financing, or as permitted under the Data Protection Act.”

Processing your data if you are not our client

If you are not our client, we may need to process your personal data in order to provide client services to our client, including the provision of legal advice. Where this is the case your personal data may be used in legal proceedings on behalf of our client.

We will process your personal data in these circumstances as:

- this is in our legitimate interests, our client’s legitimate interests or those of another third party; and/or
- we may be required to process that personal data to comply with our legal or regulatory obligations.

Your legal rights

We want to ensure that you remain in control of your personal data. Part of this is making sure you understand your legal rights, which are as follows:

- the right to confirmation as to whether we have your personal data and, if we do, to obtain a copy of the personal information we hold (this is known as a data subject access request);
- the right to have your data erased (though this will not apply where it is necessary for us to continue to use the data for a lawful reason);
- the right to have inaccurate data rectified;
- the right to object to your data being used for marketing or profiling; and
- where technically feasible, you have the right to personal data you have provided to us which we process automatically based on your consent or the performance of a contract. This information will be provided in a common electronic format.

Please keep in mind that there are exceptions to the rights above and, though we will always try to respond to your satisfaction, there may be situations where we are unable to do so.
